GOING BACK IN TIME

Cover page p. 85

Time: 5 mins

Ask pupils to look at the pictures. The aim is to get pupils to speak about how things were different in the past.

- Daily Life: What was different in how people lived in the past? Get pupils to speak about how their families and how their grandparents lived, which is probably what they know best.
- Experiences: Entertainment was different in the past. Ask pupils what entertainment people had in place of TV.
- Historical Events: How did armies do battle with each other? In ancient Greece armies did not have guns. They fought with swords and spears.
- Changes: All the towns and cities were different in the past. How were they different?
- Listen and match to the numbers on the cover page.

TAPESCRIPT

One hundred years ago people didn't have cars. (with 2-A)

In ancient Greece people went to the theatre. (with 1-B)

The streets of Athens looked different one hundred years ago. (with 4-D)

In ancient Greece people fought with swords and spears. (with 3-C)

LESSON 1

FAMOUS PEOPLE OF THE PAST

Aims of the Lesson

- a. To introduce the Simple Past of regular verbs and how it is formed from the present for the affirmative form.
- b. To introduce pupils on ways of making a presentation.

A. LEAD-IN

PB page: 86 / Time: 10 mins

→ Cross-curricular link: THEATRE (Θεατρική Αγωγή)

- Can the children match the photos to the numbers? Answers: 1b, 2d, 3c, 4a.

- How many children have been to Epidaurus? What do they know about Epidaurus? Can they guess how many people it can seat?
- Do any of the children know anything about Shakespeare? What do they know about him? Have they heard about The Globe Theatre? Can they guess what this might be?

B. READING

PB page: 86/Time: 15 mins/TB Introduction p. 9

→ Cross-curricular link: THEATRE (Θεατρική Αγωγή)

Pre-Reading

- Following on from the lead in, give some geographical information about London, the Thames river (the London theatres in Shakespeare's time were all on the South Bank), Stratford-upon-Avon. Give general information about the Elizabethan period. Compare and contrast to the 21st century. See the following excellent website for information on Shakespeare's Plays and Life and Times. <http://www.bardweb.net> See Cross-Cultural Corner in this unit for more information (TB p. 87).
- Ask pupils whether they have seen any of Shakespeare's plays as films on TV.
- If not, read out some of Shakespeare's most famous works and see if they ring a bell.
- Explain that The Globe Theatre still exists now as a replica. How do the pupils imagine the plays were performed? Did they have lights in that time? From the photo, were the people standing or sitting or both?

While-Reading

Be prepared to answer questions the pupils may have on Shakespeare. The aim is that the pupils should be able to have a first contact with this famous playwright and England during this period of the past.

Post-Reading

- Pupils should by now have an understanding of the main themes of Shakespeare's life:

the period he lived in, his life, his plays, The Globe Theatre.

- In the first column pupils list main themes for a presentation. In the second column, the statements one would write about Shakespeare in order to prepare a presentation.
- Other possible topics for the first column: His tragedies, his comedies, his histories, Shakespeare on film and TV.

Differentiated Activities (*): Use Activity A, p. 145 to compile an easy chart with information about Shakespeare.

For a more difficult reading, see the background text about the famous line from Hamlet, "To be or not to be".

C. LISTENING

PB page: 87/Time: 15 mins/TB Introduction p.10

→ Cross-curricular link: THEATRE (Θεατρική Αγωγή)

Pre-Listening

- We are looking at Epidauros and The Globe Theatre in more detail. Check what pupils know about Epidauros. Then make them read chart.
- Check what they know about The Globe.
- Get them to predict the differences between the two and to predict answers for the blank spaces in The Globe column.

While-Listening

Pupils are listening for specific information to fill in the blanks on the Globe Theatre:

number of seats, number of rows, whether the theatre was open or closed, what the theatre was made out of and its acoustics.

TAPESCRIPT

Welcome to The Globe Theatre! This theatre was built in 1599. Shakespeare was one of the owners of the original theatre.

This is a very close replica. It is a round structure and is made mainly out of wood. As you can see it has 3 rows of balconies. There is also a central courtyard where the stage is. It could hold 3,000 people.

The richer people had seats in the balconies. The poorer people instead did not have seats but stood in the central courtyard. As you can see, the stage is about one and half metres above the ground. This stopped the people in the courtyard from jumping onto the stage.

Because the central courtyard was uncovered, plays were performed only between May and September and because there was no artificial lighting they were performed in the early afternoons.

The acoustics were very poor and the actors and actresses had to shout their lines in order to be heard.

As in ancient Greece, because women were not allowed to perform, men performed women's roles

The flag of the theatre showed Hercules carrying a globe – that was the logo of the theatre. The motto of the theatre was in Latin: "totus mundus agit histrionem" which means, "The whole world is a stage".

The Theatre first opened with a performance of Shakespeare's Julius Caesar.

Post Listening

- Answers for missing blanks in The Globe column: Seats: 3000; Rows: 3; Open or closed: Open; Made out of: Wood; Acoustics: Poor.
- Pupils refer back to Comparatives of Unit 6 and write sentences comparing the 2 theatres.

Examples:

- The acoustics were much better at Epidauros than at The Globe.
- Epidauros had many more seats than The Globe.

- Both Epidaurus and The Globe were open theatres.
- Both in Elizabethan London and in Ancient Greece, women's roles were played by men.

GRAMMAR FOCUS

PB page: 88/Time: 10 mins/TB Introduction p. 12

→ Cross-curricular link: ART

- The idea is to present the Past Tense (affirmative) through a passage speaking about a famous person of the past, in this case the painter Domenikos Theokotopoulos, known as El Greco.
- Do your pupils know anything about El Greco? Elicit information. In which century did he live? Lived at the same time as Shakespeare, but in Southern Europe. Do they know where he painted most of his paintings?
- Focus on the verbs which speak about past events, which are highlighted. Focus on the form. Most end in -ed.
- Take pupils through the chart at the bottom of the page which shows the general rules on how to form, from the present tense, the past.

D. SPEAKING

PB page: 89/Time: 10 mins/TB Introduction p. 11

→ Cross-curricular link: HISTORY

Pre-Speaking

- Explain to your pupils you will now play a guessing game. Put pupils into groups of 4-5. Each group will think of a famous person from Greek history and do some research, in secret, to find out more about them. Groups must not know each other's famous persons.
- Wait till all groups have finished preparing their data.

While-Speaking

Groups must guess each other's famous person. One person makes statements. Each group receives a maximum of 10 yes or no's depending on whether its statements correspond or not to the famous person. The group which guesses with the least statements is the winner.

After Speaking

Teacher can review the affirmative form of the past tense.

KEY 1g, 2f, 3h, 4j, 5i, 6b, 7a, 8c, 9e, 10d.

E. SPEAKING

PB page: 89/Time: 15 mins/TB Introduction p. 11

→ Cross-curricular link: HISTORY

Pre-Speaking

- Pupils in groups need to do research on one of the 3 historical figures listed, which are part of the History classes for the 5th Dimotikou.
- Research can be done through their history books, encyclopaedias, the Internet.
- They must refer back to the main themes of the life of Shakespeare, earlier in this lesson.
- If they can, tell them to print out a portrait of the person they have chosen.

While-Speaking

- After they have set out their findings on a large piece of cardboard, pupils present their findings: the period, the person, his achievements.
- Other groups should take notes for the discussion later.

Post-Speaking

Get pupils to ask each other questions about these famous people. Questions could be to deepen knowledge of each historical period, what the famous persons really achieved and if in any way, how he changed the course of history.

LESSON 2

PAST EXPERIENCES

Aims of the Lesson

- a. To teach the questions and negative forms of the past simple.

A. LEAD-IN

PB page: 90/Time: 10 mins

This is to set the scene for the activities which follow in the unit.

- Where: London and a police station
- What: see if pupils have any ideas.

B. LISTENING & READING

PB page: 90/Time: 15 mins/ TB Introduction pp. 9, 10

Pre-Listening

What questions might the policeman be asking Jack Smith?

While-Listening

Pupils need to listen to the text twice, maybe 3 times.

TAPESCRIPT

Policeman: So, Mr. Smith, were you in Central London yesterday afternoon?

Jack: Yes, I was. You see, I work at a restaurant in Oxford Street.

Policeman: Where were you at four o'clock in the afternoon, then?

Jack: I was at work.

Policeman: Were you really? Your boss told us you were out.

Jack: Hm, well yes, I was outside for a while...

Policeman: What time did you leave the restaurant?

Jack: Well, I don't remember exactly, but I think it was at about 3.30.

Policeman: I see. And what time did you get back?

Jack: Well, first I went to a café to buy some donuts, then I met my boss's brother to give him some documents and then I went back to work...

Policeman: What time did you arrive at the restaurant, then?

Jack: Well, at about four, I guess....

Policeman: But your boss said you didn't get back until five o'clock, Mr. Smith!

Jack: Well, I don't know really, you see I didn't have my watch on, so....

Policeman: So where were you between half past three and five?

Jack: Well, as I said before, I was at the café and then at my boss's brother's office...

Policeman: How long did you stay in the office?

Jack: Hm, for about forty-five minutes, I suppose...

Policeman: But your boss's brother told us you stayed in his office for only a couple of minutes!

Jack: Well, yes, I stayed in his office for only a few minutes, but Policeman: But what, Mr. Smith?

Jack: Well, you see, my girlfriend works in that office, so... I had a little chat with her...

Policeman: A chat? How long did that chat last? One hour?

Jack: Hm, you see, we also had a cup of coffee at a café nearby.

Policeman: Mr. Smith, something in your story doesn't make much sense, I'm afraid.

Jack: But why? Why won't you believe me? What's wrong with some coffee? Can't I have some coffee with my girlfriend for a change?

Post- Listening

- The wrong answer is the second. He never agrees he got back at 5.
- Ask the pupils if they think Jack is covering something up.

ACTIVITY BOOK:

UNIT 7 • LESSON 2 • ACTIVITY A • p. 45

KEY

Where were you?

Was someone else with you?

What time did you get home?

What did you do that evening?

Did you hear anything strange?

Did you go outside on your veranda?

Did you see Mrs. Bullock that night?

Did Mrs. Bullock tell you something was missing from her apartment?

C. ROLE PLAY

PB page: 91/Time: 15 mins/ TB Introduction p.11

- Matchings: 1e, 2a, 3d, 4f, 5c, 6b.
- All pupils in pairs must be clear on who is the policeman and who is Jack Smith.
- Get pupils to focus on the questions forms and also on the attitude of each character. The policeman should be authoritative and Jack maybe a little nervous.
- Monitor the pairs as they act out the dialogue.
- Get the best pair to act it out to the whole class at the end.

D. LISTENING

PB page: 91/Time: 15 mins/TB Introduction p. 10

Pre-Listening

- From the picture pupils describe the scene.
- Instruct the pupils they need to put the sentences in the right order to reconstruct the series of events when Jack was with his girlfriend, before the robbery.
- Pupils read through the sentences before listening.

While-Listening

Pupils listen to the text at least 3 times.

TAPESCRIPT

- Thank you for coming at such short notice, Miss Adams.
 - Oh, you're welcome, Sir. But what is this all about? Why did you want to see me?
 - Well, we'd like to ask you a few questions about what you did on Monday afternoon.
 - Oh, I see. You mean Monday 4th May, is that right?
 - Quite right, Miss Adams. So, where were you on Monday afternoon?
 - Well, I was at work of course.
 - Did you leave the office where you work by any chance?
 - Hm, yes, I did. You see, a friend of mine came by and... we went out for some coffee.
 - What time did you leave your office, Miss Adams?
 - Well, let me see.... Jack, I mean my friend, came by at about half past three and...
 - So, you left your office at half past three..
 - Hm, I'm afraid I can't be sure. You see, Jack looked pretty moody, well, a bit worried and

I was worried, too. You see, his mother is in hospital and I thought something had happened to her, so...

- And?

- Well, I asked him what was wrong but Jack didn't feel like talking, I'm afraid. He said he was tired, but I didn't believe him.

Anyway, he suggested we go out for a cup of coffee. So we went out.

- And where did you go?

- We went to a café just opposite my office. It's called "The Brown Corner". It's Jack's favourite café and I really like it myself.

- And then? How long did you stay there?

- Not long, I'm afraid. Jack was silent, he was just staring at the walls, and... Then he did something really strange.

- What?

- Well, he stood up and said he had to leave. He disappeared before I even talked to him. Pretty strange, really. You see, Jack is usually talkative and nice. He tells jokes and we have a good laugh but last Monday he was a different person all together.

- What time did Jack leave, Miss Adams?

- Quarter to four, actually. He just rushed out of the café without saying a word. Anyway, what's wrong? How come you ask me such questions? Is Jack all right? Is he sick or hurt by any chance?

- Don't worry, Miss Adams. Your friend is OK. It's just Police routine...

- I find it hard to believe it, I'm afraid.

- Hm, thanks a lot for your time Miss Adams. Enjoy your evening.

- Thank you. But where is Jack? Is he here?

Post-Listening

- Answers in this order: 5, 4, 7, 1, 3, 10, 2, 6, 9, 8.
- Discuss with pupils whether this evidence could go against Jack Smith.

E.WRITING

PB page: 92/Time: 15 mins/ TB Introduction p. 10

Pre-Writing

- Pupils must refer back to both the previous Listening as well as Jack's statements on p. 78.
- They must find points where the two statements are the same or may differ.

While-Writing

Ensure pupils are checking the texts carefully. The answers must be from the texts, not the pupils' imagination.

Post-Writing

The answers, comparing against Jack's "THENS" on p. 83:

- Same:
 - He stayed in his boss's brother office where his girlfriend works only a few minutes.
 - He says he went out with his girlfriend.
- Different:
 - He says he stayed with Sue for a long time in the office, maybe one hour.

- This is both a presentation and an activity for the pupils to work on.

- As in the case of the earlier Grammar Focus, the presentation is done through a text. This is about another famous Greek painter, the icon painter Theophanis the Greek who lived for much of his life in Russia.
- Pupils read the text.
- Elicit the negative and question forms from the text.

G. SPEAKING & LISTENING

PB page: 93/Time: 15 mins/ TB Introduction pp. 10, 11

Pre-Listening

- Ask pupils where the scene is taking place.
- Teach lexis: stocking, banknotes, tremble.
- Pupils describe orally what happened.

While-Listening

Play the tape. Aim is for the pupils to check whether Mrs White said something similar to the pupils' description of the story.

TAPESCRIPT

Policeman (P): Now Mrs. White, you are here at the police station with us because we saw you on the close circuit TV camera tape.

Mrs. White (W): Yes, I was at the bank when the robbery happened.

P: What did you see?

W: I was walking out and I saw the robber come in.

P: Did he have anything over his face?

W: Yes, he had a lady's stocking. He looked mean! I was scared!!

P: So you didn't see his face.

W: No I didn't – not with that stocking covering it.

P: Did he have a gun?

W: Yes, he had a gun and he told everyone to stay still or else he'd shoot. I thought I was going to die!!

P: How tall was he?

W: About 6 feet.

P: What did you do then?

W: I froze – but I was trembling all over!

P: What happened next?

W: The robber went up to the cashier and asked for the contents of the safe.

P: And then?

W: There wasn't a lot in the safe. He was disappointed! When the cashier gave him the money he ran out, taking off the stocking as he was going out. I wanted to trip him so he'd fall flat on his face!! Ha, ha, ha.

P: Did you see his face?

W: No, because he was already outside the main doors.

P: Thanks for your help.

Post-Listening

See how many pupils were right?

6. Where did Alexander the Great fight most of his battles.
7. When did Alexander die?
8. No, Picasso painted Guernica.
9. He discovered penicillin.
10. Was Maria Callas famous?

H. WRITING

PB page: 93/Time: 15 mins/ TB Introduction p. 10

Pre-Writing

Give out the following clues for 3 different endings to different pupils:

1. Mrs. White trips the bank robber; the robber falls and spills the banknotes all over the floor.
2. Mrs. White beats the robber over the head with her handbag. The robber falls unconscious and is handcuffed by the police.
3. Mrs. White shouts out to everyone to attack the robber and the people in the bank seize the robber.
4. Allow pupils to come up with their own version if they wish to do so. The important aspect is that pupils should use their imagination.

While-Writing

Discreetly monitor pupils' writing progress.

Post-Writing

Pupils read out their versions and discuss.

LESSON 3

PAST EXPERIENCES

Aims of the Lesson

- a. To learn to talk about famous leaders of the past.

A. READING

PB page: 94/Time: 15 mins/ TB Introduction p. 9

→ Cross-curricular link: HISTORY

Pre-Reading

- Review what pupils know about Alexander the Great.
- Without looking at the map, can the pupils tell you where he travelled to between the ages of 22 and 33, when he died?
- Now look at the map and take the pupils through the areas where Alexander travelled.
- Can pupils think of examples of great leaders? Elicit what makes a great leader.
- Explain difficult vocabulary items: murder, conquer, enemy, navy, tactics, targeted, withdraw, capture, causeway, march, settle.

- Make sure pupils see there are 4 separate paragraphs, each with its own story and point to be made.

While-Reading

Get pupils to work in pairs. Ensure they do not get bogged down by difficulties in vocabulary and syntax. Get them to focus on the meaning of each point.

Post-Reading

In small groups, get pupils to choose one of the four statements and discuss amongst themselves what qualities of leadership Alexander displayed in the example. They then explain to the class.

CULTURAL CORNER

Shakespeare: Background information for students

Shakespeare was an entertainer, someone who wrote to pull in a paying audience, many of whom could not read and write. In his day he was as popular as any TV series is today. Some of the stories in his plays he made up himself but mostly he adapted popular stories or events that people would have heard of. He spent his whole working life in London, writing for his living, and he was so successful that he was able to retire to a large house in Stratford-upon-Avon where he had grown up.

Human behaviour hasn't changed much since Shakespeare's time, even if clothes have changed. We don't wear doublet and hose today, but we can still make jokes about people who wear anoraks or Armani. We may not make jokes about ostlers and franklins, but we laugh at comedians' jokes about shop assistants or taxi drivers. There are people like Falstaff alive today, gross, idle, lazy drinkers who tell tall stories and try to impress women, especially those who have money. There are circumstances today in which someone may, like Isabella, face a situation where doing something they think is very wrong is the only way to help someone. Relations between men and women will always perhaps, involve the battles, doubts and differences we see between Beatrice and Benedick and Petruchio and Katharina. And surely, politicians will always be as subtle and devious as Shakespeare shows them in the extracts from Julius Caesar and Coriolanus.

Shakespeare didn't write stage directions in his scripts. The scripts that have come down to us are nearly all copies of the actors' scripts rather than his own director's script. These often contained only the specific actor's lines and cues, in case they fell into the wrong hands and a rival company put the play together and stole the audience. So you won't find many directions in the margin of his scripts, other than "enter with a flourish". He inserted subtle directions in a character's speech such as "what bloody man is that" where a more modern writer may write as a stage direction "Enter a man covered in blood as from a battle".

Shakespeare's theatre

Most of the London theatres were on the south bank of the River Thames, outside the rules of the city of London. This was because theatres had gained a bad reputation - they encouraged people to take time off work, and they brought together crowds of people from different places, which meant that germs and disease could spread quickly.

For most of Shakespeare's life, he wrote for an open-air theatre where the wealthiest people could pay for a seat, but others could choose to pay less and stand up. If you can, visit the replica of the Globe or look at some pictures of it to see how these conditions may have affected performance.

Shakespeare didn't have modern aids such as microphones, lighting, moveable sets, mechanically operated curtains or any other devices to show a different setting. Actors needed big voices to ensure that they were heard, and audiences had to accept that the scene had changed when an actor said, "This castle hath a pleasant seat" or "So here is the forest at last". Usually the end of a scene was indicated by a pair of rhyming lines, rather than by a curtain closing or lights going down. Women's parts were acted by boy actors. This could make love scenes difficult, but most of Shakespeare's love scenes involve talk rather than action, which must have been a relief to the actors!

Shakespeare and other actors shared in the profits of their acting company, so it was important to keep coming up with plays that brought in paying audiences. Shakespeare wrote plays to suit audiences who liked romances, historical events, weepy stories and plays full of comic characters and comic scenes. In other words, he made it his business to appeal to every kind of theatregoer so that they would pay to see his plays rather than the plays at the theatre down the road.
