UNIT 8

ALL ABOUT STORIES

Cover page p. 97

Time: 3 mins

Allow pupils to look at the title of the Unit for a few seconds. Ask them to tell you what a "story" is and what kind of stories they know. Invite pupils to look at the cover page and initiate discussion about story reading and story telling. Ask them to talk about their experiences of story telling and identify the situations presented in the pictures. Prompt them so that they talk about bedtime stories or grand parents' stories at home as well as story telling in class with their teacher or at a bookshop with a storyteller or author of children's book. Make them express their feelings for these situations. Additionally, challenge them to think of reasons for extensive reading (e.g. for information, for pleasure, etc). Then ask them to read the bubbles and make guesses about the kind of books people read in each situation.

Examples of questions:

"What is a Story?" "What could a story be about?", "Do you know any stories in Greek / in English?", "Have your parents / grandparents/ teachers / writers /ever read any stories for you?", "What was it like?", "Do you like reading stories?", "Do you like others reading / telling you stories?", "Why yes / no?", "Have you ever acted out a story with your friends?", "If the answer is yes, what did you like best?", etc.

You could also pre-teach some of the vocabulary necessary for the next chapters.

- Listen and match the sentences with the photos on the cover page.

TAPESCRIPT

1. He drew his sword and killed the monster.
2. While the detective was walking along the busy avenue, he noticed someone was following him.
3. When the little girl saw the wolf, she rushed to the front door.

LESSON 1

FAIRY TALES

Aims of the Lesson

- a. To familiarize pupils with the stories and various types of books.
- b. To make pupils use their imagination creatively and think about possible continuation or ending of stories.
- c. To teach vocabulary related to stories, fairy tales, drama and theatre (drama)
- d. To teach Past Simple and Past Progressive verb forms to be used in narration of stories.
- e. To familiarize pupils with dramatization techniques and engage them in creative collaborative work so as to increase motivation and "learning by doing".
- f. To make pupils use stories and drama in order to act out their own play or organize a puppet show.
- g. To help pupils incorporate their limited experience of drama from first language into foreign language learning.

A. LEAD IN: I LOVE READING!

PB page: 98/Time : 5-7 mins

→ Cross-curricular link: Literature, Language

Initiate discussion on books and reading for pleasure. Make sure that pupils know the difference between the latter and reading for school. Then, have them answer the question in Activity A. The use of L1 is expected here. Pre-teach necessary vocabulary: fairy tale, novel, detective story, science fiction story, comic, poetry, adventure story, mystery, etc. You could use actual books, pictures, or drawings. Distinguish between reference books, encyclopaedias, history books, atlases, magazines, etc.

B. READING: THE BEGINNING OF A FAIRY TALE

PB pages: 98/Time: 10-15 mins/TB Introduction p. 9

Pre-Reading

Tell pupils that they are going to read the first part of a story. Ask them to read the questions a) and b). Also ensure that they know the following lexis: queen, king, prince, princess, castle, kingdom, servants and the expression: Once upon a time.

While-Reading

Let pupils read the text and elicit answers for questions a) and b) above. It is quite possible that pupils already know the story of the "Princess and the Pea". Yet, more than one title could be proposed. Accept pupils' ideas as long as they correspond to the content of the story so far.

Post-Reading

- Ask pupils to underline or highlight all adjectives in the text. They will need them for the next activity. Suggested answers: handsome (men) – beautiful, pretty (women), real / true, clever, sensitive, important, special, easy, sad, lonely, dark, terrible, dreadful, scared, awful.
- Teach unknown adjectives using a combination of techniques such as through picture prompts, miming, synonyms, antonyms, or definitions in English.
- Also, help pupils with weather words: storm, lightning, thunder, rain and their collocations: (v) to flash, (v) to boom, (v) to pour, etc. Expand vocabulary.

C. A FAIRY TALE: THE STORY UNFOLDS

PB page: 98/Time: 15 mins/TB Introduction p. 9

- Let pupils work in pairs in order to complete task a). The main characters so far are: the King, the Queen and the Prince. Help them with adjectives they have met in Activity C or encourage them use others they may know and which would describe their characters more accurately. The adjectives should deal with appearance and traits of character.
For example: The king: old, wise, worried.
- Encourage the use of pupils' imagination and ask the most talented to draw their heroes in the boxes provided.

D. WRITING

PB page: 99/Time: 15 mins/TB Introduction p. 10

- The pupils exchange ideas about what they think happened.

- List of possible lexis to be used in the writing activity.
- Sequence the events.
- Then write them in sentences.

GRAMMAR FOCUS

PB page: 100/Time: 10 mins / TB

Introduction p. 12

Aims: to teach

a. Past Progressive tense (Form)

- Positive, Interrogative and Negative Forms
- Yes / No Answers

b. Past Progressive tense (Use)

Used for past events that were going on for some time in English

- Invite pupils to look at the Grammar Section of this lesson. Ask them to study the examples and elicit how this past tense is formed. Write the following table on the blackboard and ask them to copy it in their notebooks so that they can refer to it whenever necessary:

was / were + verb + ing

- Explain to them that this is the structure we should use when we refer to events that were taking place at a certain time in the past.
- Ask the pupils to look back at the text (Activity C, pages 98-99) and underline or highlight all Past Progressive structures. Then ask them to identify their function.
- Finally, ask them to write 1-2 sentences about what they were doing the previous evening / Saturday/ Sunday afternoon at o' clock
- Ask pupils to present their sentences to the rest of their colleagues and check how many were doing similar things.
- For further practice ask them to do the following activities at the Activity Book or set them as homework.

E. A FAIRY TALE - THE ENDING

→ Cross-curricular link: Literature, Language

Pre- Listening

- Ask pupils to look at the bubble (page 99) and let them predict how the story might end.
- Pre-teach the words mattress, pea, tired, to get married. Use the pictures as prompts.
- Then ask them to read the instructions and check they know what they have to do.

While-Listening

Play the tape / CD twice. Pupils listen and put numbers under the pictures.

TAPESCRIPT

A beautiful young girl was standing outside. Rainwater was running down her hair and clothes and she was shivering with cold.

The King asked her to come inside and took her to the warm room where the Queen and the Prince were waiting. The Prince fell in love when he saw the beautiful girl. She said she was a true princess.

"Well, we'll soon find out", thought the Queen.

She went into the bedroom and asked the servants to prepare a bed for the night. Then, she put a tiny green pea on the bottom of the bed.

"Bring more mattresses!", she ordered the servants.

And, that night, the princess slept on top of twenty mattresses and twenty thick duvets.

In the morning the Queen asked, "Did you sleep well, my dear?"

"No", she groaned. "There was something hard in the bed and I didn't sleep at all. I'm black and blue all over!"

Now the Queen knew. She smiled and told her son, "Only a real princess can have such delicate skin."

"A real princess at last!", gasped the Prince. "My search is over!"

And so the Prince married the princess. As for the pea, it was put in a museum. It's still there, unless someone has stolen it.

- First help them prepare their puppet. You could have asked them to bring the necessary material beforehand
- Necessary materials: scissors, coloured pens, glue, magazines, wool, fabric, drinking straws, etc. or any other material pupils might find appropriate for their character.
- Instruct them to tape the back of the puppet to the end of a drinking straw once they have completed it. Then it will be ready and they could use it to put on the play.
- You could help them make a tiny theatre using an empty cardboard box with a bottom as big as you would like your screen to be. Cut out a rectangular hole on the bottom using a graphic artist's blade or scissors. This will be the stage of the theatre.
- Using coloured construction paper or fabric draw and cut out curtains for your theatre. Glue the curtains to the box. (Figure 2) Go to pages 97-98 for more information.
- Put the tiny stage on a desk and the pupils could hide behind the desk while they move their puppets on the "stage"

H. WRITE A PLAY AND PERFORM A PUPPET SHOW

PB page: 101/Time: 15 - 20 mins / TB

Introduction p. 10

→ Cross-curricular link: Drama (ΘΕΑΤΡΙΚΗ ΑΓΩΓΗ)

- Organize the class in groups of 5-6 pupils. Make sure that each group is formed by mixed ability pupils.
- Let them read the instructions and decide which project they would like to work on.
- Each group should appoint one member who would be the director of the play or the puppet show. This person should give directions and control the whole production.
- Another thing you must remind them to do is to have one person who will keep notes of everything they do – dialogues, material needed, ideas for prompts, etc.
- You should move around and always praise what they are doing. Accept their ideas and offer yours when you think they are needed.
- Encourage the shy pupils to take a more active part in the play or help the more competent pupils realize that all pupils have talents which could prove useful for the completion of the task. For example, some members could choose the music or they could draw the scenery. They could either bring a toy castle or prepare the mattresses for the scenery. It is very important for all pupils to feel secure and try this task.
- You could take photos of the preparation stage or either videotape it. You could use it to offer feedback to the groups before the final performance or you could leave the pupils watch it and offer suggestions for improvements – peer instruction.
- Not only the process but also the final product would be very important for pupils. So you could organize a performance for other classes at school or for their parents.
- If that is not so easy to do you could either take photos of the performance and put them on the school notice board or make copies of a video tape or a DVD you, yourself, could prepare. You could ask help from a colleague or the parents.

- You could work on similar projects throughout the year and organize a school performance at the end of the year.

LESSON 2

WHAT AN EXPERIENCE!

Aims of the Lesson

- a. To make pupils talk about past experiences and express their feelings about them.
- b. To help them organize the events in sequence by using appropriate verb forms – Past Simple and Progressive as well as relevant to context cohesive features.
- c. To help them re tell a story.
- d. To encourage writing a short story.

A. LEAD IN: GETTING SCARED

PB page: 102/Time: 3 mins

Initiate discussion. Help pupils relate their experiences either in L2 or even L1. Help with necessary vocabulary and grammatical structures but do not expand on them.

B. READING

PB pages: 102/Time : 10 - 15 mins/TB

Introduction p. 9

Pre-Reading

- Ask pupils to have a look at the drawings and let them work with a partner in order to describe what they think is happening.
- Let them predict the sequence of events.

While-Reading

- Pupils need to focus on finding the correct order of events.
- Let pupils work with their partner to do the task. In case they ask about difficult words, make them guess their meaning from the context. The words in bold will be clarified in the next activity.

Post-Reading

- Let different pairs compare results and ask some of them to report to the class.
- Encourage discussion about the sequence of events and do not offer solution from the beginning. Ask them to explain the reasons for their choice.

KEY a1, b2, d3, c4, e5.

C. USEFUL WORDS TO RETELL THE STORY

PB page: 103/Time: 7 -8 mins/TB Introduction
p. 9-10

- Explain to pupils that when one has to retell a story they might need some of the vocabulary used in the original text. So, they should work independently on unknown vocabulary, which is something that they should do when they read for pleasure.
- So, use the class dictionary / -ies and show pupils how they could work with them in order to find meaning of unknown words or phrases. (You could have asked them to bring their own dictionaries in the previous lesson. It would be a good opportunity to show them that they need to have one and propose a few titles that would suit their needs at this level).
- Let pupils work in pairs and do the activity. They could write on their notebooks.
- Ask some pairs to report to the rest of the class.
- Give feedback. Praise all pupils for their good work and effort.

KEY 1b, 2d, 3e, 4c, 5a, 6f.

KEY 1. B, 2. A, 3. C.

D. I WAS FRIGHTENED

PB page: 103/Time: 5 mins/TB Introduction

- Allow pupils to discuss the questions in groups. First they should look at the questions. Then make guesses about the answers.
- Challenge the members in each group to discuss and make comments on choices.
- Make them think of various kinds of jokes they played on others or vice versa. Ask them to discuss reactions.
- Let pupils make suggestions about what kind of humour is acceptable, dangerous, silly, cruel, etc.
- Organize a class discussion. Use of L1 is also expected at this stage.

E. THE BROWNS AND THE GUNSHOT

PB page: 104/Time: 5-7 mins/TB Introduction

p. 10

Pre-Listening

- Set the scene of the incident and familiarize pupils with the setting and police procedures. Ask them to talk about the pictures – in this way they will be prepared for some of the vocabulary items they are going to listen in the tapescript.
- Choose any word or phrase from the tapescript you think that should be pre taught. (E.g. Officer, colleague, Chinese meal, gunshot, co-operation, etc.)
- Check that they understand the instructions.

While-Listening

- Play the tape / CD once.
- Pupils do the task.

TAPESCRIPT

- So, Mr. Brown. I'm afraid I have to ask you and your family a few questions about the other night. Is that all right with you?

- Yes, of course, Officer. What would you like to know?

- Well, my colleagues and I need to know where you were last Tuesday evening.

- I see. Well, I was at home.

- Hm, and were you alone in the house?

- No, the whole family were here. Except for my father, that is.... He's in Spain at the moment...

- I see. And what were you doing, Mr. Brown?

- Hm, I think I was watching TV.

- No, daddy, you weren't. It was your turn to do the cooking, remember?

- Oh, yes, you're quite right, dear. Sorry, Officer. I wasn't watching TV, I was cooking my specialty, a splendid Chinese meal...

- Hm, I see. How about you, young man? What's your name?

- I'm Charles.

- And what were you doing when the you heard the gunshot?

- Well, I was in the kitchen with Daddy.... I think I was helping him with dinner.... Oh, no, I was feeding our pet cat, Sir... You see, it loves Chinese food herself...

- Oh, that's strange. Now, let me ask you,

Mrs. Brown. Were you in the kitchen, too?

- No, I was in the living room. I was watching a documentary on whales... It was so interesting that I was absolutely absorbed by it, so when I heard the gunshot I jumped up with terror... It was awful, just awful, Officer....

- I'm sure it was. Now, how about this lovely little girl... Who are you?

- I'm Angela. I was at home, too. I was talking on the phone and...

- And what?

- Well, I got so scared... I ran to Mummy the moment I heard the bang...

- I see. How about you, now? You must be Sam, right?

- Yes, that's right, Sir.

- What were you doing, Sam? Were you cooking or watching TV?

- Neither, Sir. I was in my bedroom, reading a detective story...

- Ha, ha... Anyway, that will be all. Thank you all for your co-operation. Sorry to bother you so late in the evening...

- No problem, Officer. By the way, Sam is cooking tonight. He's cooking an Indian dish, his speciality. Would you like to try it?

- Thank you so much. That's very kind of you, but I'm afraid we really must go. You see, we need to see your neighbours, too. Enjoy your meal.

- Thank you. Goodnight.

Play the tape / CD again and ask pupils to check their answers.

Aims: to teach

a. How the two Past tenses combine in order for the speakers to be able to refer to past experiences

b. Remind them of the form and uses of the two Past tenses as they have been presented so far.

c. Ask them to guess how these tenses relate.

d. Refer to the relationship of the two Past tenses: the Past Progressive which was going on and was "interrupted" by other past actions in Past Simple tense form.

e. The following diagram can be drawn on the blackboard to represent the relationship of the two Past forms:

f. Finally, refer to the use of "when" and "while" when combining the two tenses. Ask them, finally, to draw in the box.

F. PART OF A STORY

PB page: 105/Time: 10 - 15 mins/TB Introduction p. 11

• In pairs or groups of 3-4 the pupils read the instructions and then they discuss how the story evolves.

- Challenge them to add any other information they find appropriate or relevant to their story.
- Offer ideas and your help with vocabulary items when asked for it. Make sure they use L2 while doing the task.
- Invite brainstorming regarding endings for the story. Advise them to make use of the unexpected element or funny incidents so common in stories.
- Accept all proposed versions and have pupils present them to the rest of their classmates.
- Encourage talented pupils to draw the final picture(s) of the story.

Differentiated Pedagogy (*): For a different version direct pupils to Appendix, page 145, Activity A. Help less competent pupils do the activity using a dictionary or offer your help.

G. WRITE A SHORT STORY

PB page: 105/Time: 10 – 15 mins/TB Introduction p. 10

- Ask pupils to read the instructions and make sure that they have understood what they have to write and who for. Explain to them that the “audience” is very important when we write because they determine the register and style of what we write. Here, they must use semi-formal styles because the “audience” will be young readers of an international magazine.
- Move around the groups of pupils working on the task and offer help and advice.
- Another option would be to set the task as Homework.
- In all cases, display the stories after they have been checked and put them on the classroom notice board.

LESSON 3

A TRADITIONAL STORY

Aims of the Lesson

- a. To familiarize pupils with various texts dealing with Easter.
- b. To compare past and present traditions in Greece and abroad.

- c. To engage pupils in collaborative writing of a story.

A. EASTER DAY

PB page: 106 / Time: 15 – 20 mins / TB

Introduction p. 11

Pre-Reading

- Invite pupils to present what they know about Easter in Greece. Ask them to present ways they celebrate Easter Day at home.
- Invite other pupils coming from other countries in the world to talk about relevant customs in their countries.
- Pre-teach relevant vocabulary – see texts.

While-Reading

- Pupils read the three texts and are asked to answer some comprehension questions. E.g. – text 1: “What do they know about the writer, Alexandros Papadiamantis?”, “Why did Papa-Kyriakos go to Kalyvia?”, “What happened inside the church?”, “What were the grown-ups doing during the Easter meal?” etc.
- Ask pupils to read the next two texts and keep notes about customs in other countries.

Post-Reading

- Let pupils use their notes and in pairs discuss what they have found in the texts. They should refer to things they find strange, funny, interesting, sad, etc.
- Then direct them to the Appendix, pages 146-148, and assign different texts to different pupils. They exchange information after reading their texts.
- Finally, they report to the class expressing their feelings: which customs they like best and why.

KEY Free Activity. It encourages further reading.

CROSS-CURRICULAR PROJECT

PB page: 106/Time: 30 mins/TB Introduction p. 15. See appendix p. 148.

→ Cross-curricular link: Language

- Let pupils form groups and choose which project they would like to do.

- Ask them to decide on the theme and who is going to do what. They should keep notes.
- Remind them of structures and vocabulary items they used before.
- Advise them to accept others' ideas and suggestions.
- Their works could be presented in class or their written products could be displayed on the classroom walls..

DRAMA

TB Introduction p. 11

Drama in the ELT classroom is not only about the product (the performance at the end of the year) but an integral part of the process of language learning. "Dramatizing" is the best term for referring to the process of the learner's active involvement in a text.

Dramatization is useful as it offers:

- Motivation
- Familiar activities
- Confidence
- Group dynamics
- Catering for different learning styles
- Language personalization
- Language in context
- Cross-curricular content
- Change of the pace in the lesson

Making a Screen

This can be done in many ways, but one of the easiest is as follows: Find an empty cardboard box with a bottom as big as you'd like your screen to be (say 12-by-18-inches, or so!). Turn the box up side down and draw a line (with a pencil, pen, or marker) 1 1/2 inches in from three edges and 2 1/2 inches in from what will become the bottom edge (see dotted line on Figure 1).

Cut the cardboard out from the middle of the frame, using a utility knife, graphic artist's blade, or scissors (let the adult handle the sharp tools!). Next, draw lines on the sides of the box as shown in Figure 2. Use a knife or scissors to cut along the lines to remove the top, front, and bottom sides of the box. (You now have a theater frame with "wings!")

Find a piece of white cloth - like a handkerchief or a piece of an old sheet--big enough to cover the opening in the frame. Use masking tape or duct tape to fasten the corners of the cloth over the back of the frame opening (Figure 3). When the corners are tight and there are no wrinkles, put tape along all the edges. (It's important to keep the screen tight and wrinkle-free!)

Set your screen up on a table edge as shown in Figure 4 and position a chair or short table so you can set up an unshaded light (or even a floodlight) as shown.

Making Shadow Puppets

These can be simple stick figures or puppets with articulated limbs. For a stick figure simply draw (or trace) the outline of a character (a man with a cane, a woman wearing a hat, a roaring lion, whatever) onto thin but stiff cardboard, and then cut the figure out. You can cut characters out of magazine or newspaper photos and trace them onto cardboard, but remember to leave extensions below the feet for the puppeteer to hold; or you can glue light wooden extensions your cardboard puppets.

To make an articulated puppet, cut out two cardboard versions of the same character. Use the second one to cut out just the leg (or arm) you want to move. Punch a hole through both the full puppet and the limb. Put a brass paper fastener, through both pieces and spread the prongs. Practice “walking” with your puppet by moving the hinged leg back and forth.

Think of all the puppet characters you can make with hinged legs or arms or jaws, from kids and clowns to horses and alligators.

You’re limited only by your imagination!

Showing Your Shadows

Set your theater up with a lamp a few feet behind your screen. Sit on a short stool or kneel on the floor at point B to operate your puppets. (NOTE: You might want to put a tablecloth or drape over the table front to hide your actions from the audience.) Hold your puppets up at point A and the audience (at point D) will see the shadows on the other side of the screen. As in most theaters, turning out unnecessary room lights will help the audience focus on the on-screen action.

Find or make up a fun story script and create as many puppets as it takes to tell the story. You can create shadow scenery too - including trees, buildings, bridges, and anything else with a recognizable shadow shape. You can tape the scenery pieces in place - to the chair or the back of the screen, wherever they need to be between the light and the screen.
